Recently, significant amendments to the UAE's tourist visa policy were implemented, allowing visitors to extend their visas two times without leaving the country.

The following information is for those looking for information about tourist visa extensions in Dubai.

What is the validity of a tourist visa?

Tourist visas to the United Arab Emirates can be provided for 30 days or 90 days, with a single entrance or several entries, depending on your itinerary and travel plans. Recently, the United Arab Emirates introduced a five-year visa that allows travelers to enter the country several times on their behalf and remain in the country for 90 days on each visit. The option is to extend the stay for an additional 90 days on each subsequent visit.

What kind of visit visa can be extended?

It is possible to extend an individual's visit or tourist visa for 30 days twice without leaving the country. The country offers the facility to its visitors for more extended stays by extending their access. There will be an additional fee of AED 600 for each renewal requested by visitors or tourists who apply before the first expires. For visa overstays who fail to renew their visas, AED

100 will be imposed as a penalty. The fine will be calculated daily after the expiry of the ten-day grace period.

How to Apply for a visit visa extension?

The UAE, unlike many other countries, does not grant visas through its foreign embassies or consulates abroad. This complicates obtaining a tourist visa. Obtaining a visa for the UAE is not doable on your own. A sponsor in the UAE is required, or you can apply through an approved agency. In order to extend your visa, your sponsor will do everything for you. If you are not sure when to leave and your visa expiry arrives. Visa extensions are obtained via your sponsor, who should be contacted as soon as possible.
